This is the typical display you are used to seeing in the catalog for the place where you are searching for the records.

You can also do this process in reverse, and drill back up in levels of places within. Do this by clicking on the button in the top right area of the catalog page:

SEE: PART OF ENGLAND, KENT

If you click on that button it will return you to the catalog page for Kent showing holdings at the county level where you will see again the button for places within Kent.

The screenshot shows a catalog search results page for Kent. At the top, there are buttons for 'SEE: PART OF ENGLAND' and 'SEE: PLACES WITHIN ENGLAND, KENT'. A red arrow points from the text 'places within Kent' in the previous paragraph to the 'SEE: PLACES WITHIN ENGLAND, KENT' button. The page displays search results for 'Results (1,175)' and includes sections for 'Notes', 'Place Information', 'Subject' (with dropdowns for 'United Kingdom, England, Kent - Archives and libraries (7)' and 'United Kingdom, England, Kent - Archives and libraries - Inventories, registers, catalogs (43)'), 'Search Terms', and navigation links for 'TIPS AND RESOURCES', 'PRINT', 'CATALOG PRINT LIST (0)', and 'SEARCH'.

Remember that the place search is oriented by jurisdiction. If you click on the “part of” button it goes up to the next higher level of jurisdiction; if you click on “places within” it goes down to the next lower level of jurisdiction. For example, when viewing the county of Kent, “part of” goes up to England; “places within” goes down to the parishes in that county.

This is a very useful feature of the FamilySearch catalog that allows you to drill down within a geographic or jurisdiction level such as a country, state, province or county to find place names and the holdings in FamilySearch associated with those places. You can use this same process for states within U.S. and provinces or regions in other countries.
